Contributors

In March of 2016, MUUSJN secured pledges of support from 21 Unitarian Universal clergy and lay leaders from 16 out of 26 Michigan Unitarian Universalist congregations. Leaders from the United Church of Christ, Michigan Conference, and the National Council of Jewish Women, Greater Detroit provided feedback and support this project. Special thanks to a Steering Committee of people from all three faith groups who offered their views about toolkit content.

Introduction and purpose of toolkit

For decades our denominations, and many of our congregations, in fact many people who will be using this toolkit, have engaged in anti-racist, anti-oppression trainings and work. We say we are doing it, we say our religious values are based on love, community and the dignity for all. Yet, most of our congregations are still full of white people. Certainly within the hired and elected leadership of our congregations and the national offices, there are very few people of color and even fewer black people. Within our walls, as well as the communities our congregations are in, we are not doing enough to challenge white privilege and supremacy, nor are most of our congregations connected to local organizations or leaders doing the work of black liberation. As we are not acting as part of the solution, we are part of the problem.

With the state of the country today, there is much work to do. The murder of black people by police officers must be stopped! Since the election of President Trump there has been a significant increase in hate crimes against people of color in Michigan. The work of challenging racism must begin within ourselves, then with people closest to us, and within our congregations.

Unitarian Universalists recommitted themselves to racial justice with an Action of Immediate Witness, that was adopted at their June 2015 General Assembly that calls for supporting the Black Lives Matter Movement. www.uua.org/statements/support-black-lives-matter-movement

This inspired the Michigan Unitarian Universalist Social Justice Network to want to create a resource guide for our congregations. In 2016, MUUSJN received grants from both the Unitarian Universalist Funding Program and from the Buck Dinner to create this toolkit and to provide education and action to challenge racism. We expanded the scope of this project from just engaging Unitarian Universalists to include resources from our Jewish and United Church of Christ partners. We are grateful for their participation in creating a more rich interfaith resource for all of our congregations.

This Toolkit seeks to provide information needed by people grounded by their religious and/or humanistic traditions, who seek to challenge white privilege and white supremacy making society more just and humane for all. This Toolkit is limited in its focus on three predominantly white religious traditions: United Church of Christ, Unitarian Universalism, and Judaism. Within Judaism and Unitarian Universalism, there are some followers who see themselves primarily grounded in humanism rather than theism. This Toolkit honors both theist and humanistic traditions found in the varieties of religious experience.

Since the universe of information related to anti-racism work is extensive, this Toolkit will seek to provide highlights of resources that people in this project feel can be useful for our three denominations to take the next steps toward challenging racism within ourselves and within our communities. After the publishing of this toolkit, we will continue to share new resources with our congregations.

Yours in social justice,

Glossary

Ally
Someone who makes the commitment and effort to recognize their privilege (based on gender, class, race, sexual identity, etc.) and work in solidarity with oppressed groups in the struggle for justice. Allies understand that it is in their own interest to end all forms of oppression, even those from which they may benefit in concrete ways.

http://racialequitytools.org/glossary

Black Liberation
The organized struggle by black people of the dismantling of institutional racism and their freedom from white supremacy.

Jennifer Teed

Colonialism
Colonization can be defined as some form of invasion, dispossession and subjugation of a people. The invasion need not be military; it can begin—or continue—as geographical intrusion in the form of agricultural, urban or industrial encroachments. The result of such incursion is the dispossession of vast amounts of lands from the original inhabitants. This is often legalized after the fact. The long-term result of such massive dispossession is institutionalized inequality. The colonizer/colonized relationship is by nature an unequal one that benefits the colonizer at the expense of the colonized.

http://racialequitytools.org/glossary#colonialism

Critical Race Theory
The Critical Race Theory...movement considers many of the same issues that conventional civil rights and ethnic studies take up, but places them in a broader perspective that includes economics, history, and even feelings and the unconscious. Unlike traditional civil rights, which embraces incrementalism and step by step progress, critical race theory questions the very foundations of the liberal order, including equality theory, legal reasoning, enlightenment rationalism and principles of constitutional.

http://racialequitytools.org/glossary#colonialism

Cultural Appropriation
Theft of cultural elements for one’s own use, commodification, or profit — including symbols, art, language, customs, etc. — often without understanding, acknowledgement, or respect for its value in the original culture. Results from the assumption of a dominant (i.e. white) culture’s right to take other cultural elements.

Discrimination
The unequal treatment of members of various groups based on race, gender, social class, sexual orientation, physical ability, religion and other categories.

Income Inequality
Using data compiled from United States tax records, economists have been able to trace income inequality for almost the entire 20th century to the present (Figure 1) (Saez and Piketty). In 2012, the level of inequality has risen to be as extreme as it was in the 1920s, where the top 10% of the households obtained 50 percent of all income.

Institutional Racism
Anonymous, subtle and systemic discrimination based on race, in legal instruments, as well as in private organizations and professions (educational, legal, healthcare, political, religious, etc), private businesses and public decision making bodies.

Intersectionality
An approach largely advanced by women of color, arguing that classifications such as gender, race, class, and others cannot be examined in isolation from one another; they interact and intersect in individuals’ lives, in society, in social systems, and are mutually constitutive.

Exposing [one’s] multiple identities can help clarify they ways in which a person can simultaneously experience privilege and oppression. For example, a Black woman in America does not experience gender inequalities in exactly the same way as a white woman, nor racial oppression identical to that experienced by a Black man. Each race and gender intersection produces a qualitatively distinct life.

http://racialequitytools.org/glossary

Micro-aggression
A comment or action that subtly and often unconsciously or unintentionally expresses a prejudiced attitude toward a member of a marginalized group (such as a racial minority).

https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/microaggression

Prejudice
A pre-judgment or unjustifiable, and usually negative, attitude of one type of individual or groups toward another group and its members. Such negative attitudes are typically based on unsupported generalizations (or stereotypes) that deny the right of individual members of certain groups to be recognized and treated as individuals with individual characteristics.

Racism
Individual, cultural, institutional and systemic ways by which differential consequences are created for groups historically or currently defined as white being advantaged, and groups historically or currently defined as non-white (African, Asian, Hispanic, Native American, etc.) as disadvantaged. That idea aligns with those who define racism as prejudice plus power, a common phrase in the field. Combining the concepts of prejudice and power points out the mechanisms by which racism leads to different consequences for different groups. The relationship and behavior of these interdependent elements has allowed racism to recreate itself generation after generation, such that systems that perpetuate racial inequity no longer need racist actors or to explicitly promote racial differences in opportunities, outcomes and consequences to maintain those differences.

White Privilege
White privilege is an institutional (rather than personal) set of benefits granted to those of us who, by race, resemble the people who dominate the powerful positions in our institutions. One of the primary privileges is that of having greater access to power and resources than people of color do; in other words, purely on the basis of our skin color doors are open to us that are not open to other people.

White Supremacy
White supremacy is a historically based, institutionally perpetuated system of exploitation and oppression of continents, nations and peoples of color by white peoples and nations of the European continent; for the purpose of maintaining and defending a system of wealth, power and privilege.

Supporting Black Lives vs. Speaking For Black People

People who are not black should not attempt to speak for Black people or the Black Lives Matter movement. Rather, white people should become better listeners, followers and co-conspirators. The people most affected by the violence of our oppressive systems should be the central voice of black liberation work. White people should support that work when and how we are invited in. This toolkit will provide information about the Black Lives Matter movement, as well as other black liberation movements. However; as white people we should primarily focus on our own education and bringing in and bringing along other white people.

History of Black Liberation in America

The Birth of a Nation. Film. 2016.
Set against the antebellum South, this film follows Nat Turner, a literate slave and preacher, who orchestrated the greatest uprising in the hopes of leading his people to freedom.

This documentary film explores the history of the political organization the Black Panther Party, and features archival footage and interviews with journalists, critics and former Panthers.

Born in the rural American south, James Boggs lived nearly his entire adult life in Detroit and worked as a factory worker for twenty-eight years while immersing himself in the political struggles of the industrial urban north. In Pages from a Black Radical's Notebook: A James Boggs Reader, editor Stephen M. Ward collects a diverse sampling of pieces by Boggs, spanning the entire length of his career from the 1950s to the early 1990s.

Current Black Liberation Movements and Organizations

The work in these organizations is for black people, by black people. Some of the organizations welcome and train white allies, some have white caucus groups, and some don’t want white people at the table at all. White people need to respect the work and how and when we are invited in. There is always work for us to do in white communities.

Black Lives Matter (BLM)
BLM is a chapter-based national organization working for the validity of Black life. We are working to (re)build the Black liberation movement. #BlackLivesMatter was created in 2012 after Trayvon Martin’s murderer, George Zimmerman, was acquitted for his crime, and dead 17-year old Trayvon was posthumously placed on trial for his own murder. Rooted in the experiences of Black people in this country who actively resist our dehumanization, #BlackLivesMatter is a call to action and a response to the virulent anti-Black racism that permeates our society. Black Lives Matter is a unique contribution that goes beyond extrajudicial killings of Black people by police and vigilantes.

Change Agent Consortium
The Change Agent Consortium is a national coalition of faith, labor, civil rights organizations and active citizens. We combine the best of the protest tradition (direct action) with economic empowerment, community development and community organizing to effect real change and real solutions. We believe that authentic social change must combine the power of grassroots protest (direct action), public policy and local projects that help communities discover themselves, determine themselves and develop themselves.

Movement for Black Lives Platform
This coalition of more than 50 African-American led organizations developed a “Vision for Black Lives” policy platform. This detailed platform includes six categories: End the War on Black People; Reparations; Invest-Divest; Economic Justice; Community Control; and Political Power. It was introduced in 2016, and is being studied by black activists and their white allies.

National Action Network
National Action Network is one of the leading civil rights organizations in the Nation with chapters throughout the entire United States. Founded in 1991 by Reverend Al Sharpton, NAN works within the spirit and tradition of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. to promote a modern civil rights agenda that includes the fight for one standard of justice, decency and equal opportunities for all people regardless of race, religion, nationality or gender. Understanding Mass Incarceration. A People’s Guide to the Key Civil Rights Struggle of Our Time.

Drawing on a growing body of academic and professional work, the book describes the many competing theories of criminal justice – from rehabilitation to retribution, from restorative justice to justice reinvestment. Kilgore examines the difference between prisons and jails, probation and parole, and concepts such as the War on Drugs, broken-windows policing, three-strikes sentencing, the school-to-prison pipeline, recidivism, and prison privatization. He addresses the rapidly increasing incarceration of women, Latinos, and transgender people, the growing imprisonment of immigrants, and the devastating impact of mass incarceration on communities.

D. Economic Injustice/Employment

The enslavement of millions of Africans became America’s greatest economic resource in building a new nation. The violent exploitation of labor was embedded in America’s origins. “The heart of racism was and is economic...Due to 146 years of brutal slavery and an additional 100 years of legal segregation and discrimination, no area of the relationship between black and white people in the United States is free from the legacy of racism”, Source: “America’s Original Sin”, Jim Wallis, page 46. Previously, cities like Detroit had good paying employment opportunities in factories that could sustain families. Now, however, good paying jobs are going to professionals, manager, investors, technician who run systems. Due to racism, Black or brown people are disproportionately consigned to the lower paying jobs. Black youth’s unemployment has been alarmingly high. In the year before March 2015, between 25 and 35 percent of black teenagers who looked for work, couldn’t find it. Institutional racism in healthcare expresses the disparity among racial groups in access to quality of care, treatment, and opportunity involving who gets what and why. Indeed, there is evidence that racism exists within the U.S. health care system and among healthcare providers. However, to better understand racism one must consider how deeply it is rooted in our health care settings. According to Griffith et al., “the most common assumption is that racial and ethnic disparities in health care are the result of providers’ lack of cultural competence” (p.382). Lack of cultural competence in providers can lead to an increase in implicit biases; which affect the quality of patient-provider interactions and patient health outcomes. Implicit bias refers to the mental attitudes or stereotypes that a person may hold at an unconscious level that affects our understanding, actions, and decisions. The goal to ensure health equity requires access to the same opportunities and advancing societal efforts to address unnecessary inequalities and the elimination of health and health care disparities.

Health disparities are differences in health care services received by the two groups that are not due to differences in the underlying health care needs or preferences of members of the groups (cited in Cook, McGuire, Zaslavsky, 2012, para. 8). Due to health disparities, the vulnerable populations’ quality of care decreases and poor health outcomes increases. Social determinants of health are closely linked to health disparities and include social and economic factors. For example, low income and lack of employment, often leads to lack of access to health insurance; resulting in illnesses and injuries that go untreated, causing more complications. Other social determinants of health include lack of access to quality grocery stores that stock healthy food such as; fresh fruits and vegetables (also known as food desserts). Race and ethnicity are also factors in health disparities. According to National Center for Health Statistics, “ Non-Hispanic black persons (49.6%) were more likely than non-Hispanic white (45.1%) and Mexican-American persons (42.6%) to have at least one of three diagnosed or undiagnosed conditions: hypertension, hypercholesterolemia, or diabetes” (p.3). Indicating that African-American man and women are more likely to have one of the chronic conditions compared to a White and Mexican-American person. Furthermore, quality disparities continue, especially among different ethnicity limiting the overall improvement of health. “Blacks, Hispanics, and American Indians and Alaska Natives received worse care than Whites for about 40% of quality measures” (the U.S Department of Health and Human Service, p.11). A quality measure is defined as effectiveness, efficiency, equity of care. The disparities in the health care institution do not only influence an individual’s health status, but also its environmental, and socioeconomic status.

In conclusion, institutional racism results in persistent health disparities in the United States, causing the vulnerable populations to consistently face limited access, lower quality of care and opportunity which eventually result in poorer health outcomes. To live in a community free of disparities in health and health care we must address this issue by promoting health and wellness, getting involved in cultural competency training, and requiring health report cards from health institutions. People within the community can start promoting health and wellness by encouraging others to exercise, support the development of community gardens to increase access to healthy foods, support healthier eating habits by providing outreach and education to help people learn where to purchase healthy foods and how to prepare them. According to the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, “a poor diet is associated with major health risks that can cause illness and even death” (2017). Additionally, cultural competency training of health professionals will serve to reduce biases that research shows has a role in unequal care. The community can also require an annual health report card from their provider or health care agency. The report should contain, at a minimum, health outcomes by race and ethnicity, quality measures by race and ethnicity, and diversity services and initiatives. The health report card can be used as a tool for reporting progress or lack of progress towards equity in health care delivery and health outcomes.

Start a pen-pal relationship or begin ministering to inmates after taking training.
Concluding Remarks

Thank you for your commitment to this work. In order to make change we need members in all of our congregations taking the lead and inviting others in on this long, but necessary struggle.

This is a continued body of work. As the work in all of our lives and congregations moves forward there will be more resources to share. We hope to continue to add to this toolkit and to share information between congregations, and across the faiths. This is all of our work to do alone and together. As you move forward, please share your experiences and findings with us!

“Do not be daunted by the enormity of the world’s grief.

So justly, now. Love Mercy, now. Walk Humbly, now.

You are not obligated to complete the work, but neither are you free to abandoned it.”
